Day 1

An overnight stay in a traditional Riad in Marrakech or Imlil village (1.5hr drive from Marrakech), at the foothill of Jebel Toubkal (1740m). Dinner and mint tea will be served on arrival.

Day 2

The ascent to the mountain is an early start. Breakfast will be served, and experienced mountain guide will accompany you during your hike. A mule is provided for carrying your bags and food/water necessary for the climb. In this guided walk, you will walk through the traditional Berber villages around the surrounding area during your ascent. The route is planned that you pass the shrine of Sidi Chamharouch (2350m). A time for rest and lunch will be served upon arrival, which is prepared freshly by a local cook. After this, the walk will continue until you reach 3200m altitude and reach the Refuge Toubkal for an overnight stay. Shower facilities are available, and a traditional Moroccan meal will be provided. Tents are also available during the summer months.

Day 3

Early rise on the next day, to avoid the strong rays of the sun during summer. Breakfast will be served at 5am and the final ascent will begin around 5.30am. Refreshments will be provided during the breaks. There will be continuous trek for 3-4 hours until you reach the summit (4,137m). Once reaching the summit, there is an opportunity to enjoy the view and rest. After this, the descent from the mountain will begin; first reaching the hut (for lunch) and then return to Imlil village for an overnight stay.
